StarBASIC game engine/game Made in Japan on the C64, Amstrad, Spectrum, Dragon 32, W6502, ZX80, Infocom 32, Delphi, and PC. I've made as much use of the SEOS compiler, by Charles Forshage, than any other game engine. There is a trade-off between speed and quality. Much more detail is needed for an in-game text interface or menus than is required for an animation sequence, for example. That said, the game engine is heavily commented and fully documented, and the game engines can be built by anyone on most platforms, at least if they have a basic understanding of C or C++.
