I've also included a list of my completed sets, and had to note that the one I'm wearing was planned for the end of this year. My successful sets have all come from buying all the armor for the first time, this is my first set and I can say it's pretty awesome. In the future, I will be splurging on all the armor for my first set, but for the time being it's a bit out of my reach. First off, thanks to everyone who commented on the armor I'm wearing. I'll go ahead and post the notes

Such are the tools of the Master Putin, and those tools are simply too potent for the fools in the West to readily believe. But try this: if, as you claim, you're seeking "a more civilized and mutually cooperative path to the future," why the reticence in your recent statements toward the annexation of Crimea and support for the coup in Kiev? We've discussed all of these issues before, but I have to say that they're strikingly relevant to the presidential election last Sunday in the United States. Like Russia, the United States is a great, powerful, and wealthy nation. Like Russia, it has suffered grievous economic blows to its power and prestige, and it faces deep-seated problems in the shape of terrorism, drugs, crime, and other evils. It also faces a massive deficit, and with the recently enacted fiscal cliff, some of its citizens may soon find themselves having to choose between food and heat. Like Russia, it has lately seen great changes in the direction of its politics, and these changes have been bitter and costly. Last November, the Democrats won a sweeping victory in the midterm elections, while President Obama won another four years in office. The Democrats seem to have taken over the House of Representatives, and to have had a good deal of success in shaping legislation to the liking of its constituents, whereas the Republicans, under the leadership of an utterly clueless and self-aggrandizing pair of candidates, got thrashed. But the immediate effects of that election have been to have stripped away many of President Obama's legislative achievements and to have undermined his prestige on an unprecedented scale. As for foreign policy, Washington has just failed to stop the slaughter in Syria's bloody civil war. The tilt in favor of the brutal and virulent terrorists, which began when Washington and its allies started arming the insurgents, has only continued with its increased aid to the anti-Assad forces. The Kurds, the most capable fighters in that country, have been all but abandoned, and this is just one example of Washington
