“The game is an ideal blend of fun and challenge, with the ability to listen to great soundtracks that immerse you in the environments in a new and rewarding way”.- Massimo Cravotto - Host of Ediroli.it “An amazing gameplay experience on both PC and console, N.i.C.E. represents the best possible gaming experience available”.- Mattijs van den Berg - COO at Radikon “The first game in the genre was very strong in itself, with an excellent and original soundtrack from the very beginning”.- Matikijs van den Berg - COO at Radikon “N.i.C.E. has achieved an incredible level of quality; the original music, the story, the challenge, the attention to detail it holds, and its scope, which exceeds the typical limits of the genre”.- Álvaro Serna - Studio Founder at Portaloop Games

World Architecture: Even though the company started as an Internet radio service, the real priority has always been the work on the games. We needed a platform where we could make sure that the quality of the games could be played on top of a great music and sound experience. This is the reason we started World Architecture, our game development platform. The games, music and the interactive element are centered around the same world, and the game is composed to be in response to that music. These are the 3 main elements in the game. If one of them is missing, the game is not a game but just a mere music player.

Visuals and Graphics: The real eye-candy in the game is the visuals. The game world is entirely hand-made and we strongly believe in each environment’s realism. The game is an expression of the universe in which we live today. It is not only an art project but rather a way of saying that we are living in a time of great architectural upheaval. This is a reflection of the nature of the world we are living in at the moment.

Musical Elements: The music is an integral part of the game. The CD albums were the first soundtrack for the game. We were very happy with the result but we wanted the music to be more natural, more emotional and accessible for new players who did not have the rare expertise to listen to it properly. This is why we composed, led by Radikon’s music director Massimo

Development Team of what? I've been playing a bunch of Fallout 3 lately and the "development team" is probably best defined as the fifteen guys who did the actual coding. The "Music Team" is mostly the game's composer and he's brought in a number of people to help with the content and style. (Which, yes, is kind of a big deal.) "Seth is a rather intense and interesting man, and the like of him hasn't been seen for quite a long time, for what the world can provide."—sfxartist "He's working with some of the best artists in the industry. When I started working on music for Fallout 3, it was on a grand scale. (Nothing compared to what I was doing in Oblivion.) But still... with Seth I've been working with some of the best-loved voices in the industry."—sfxartist "He did a big job writing the script. He created the whole atmosphere and essence of the game."—voiceoverartist "The script was written by a long-time collaborator of his, and it is a great script. I was given the chance to work with the music of the script and the game itself."—voiceoverartist "This is the official soundtrack of Fallout 3, if there ever was one."—soundtrackcompany "": "I also wrote two original compositions for the soundtrack, and [N.i.C.E.] Records (a label founded by the band ": "I also wrote two original compositions for the soundtrack, and [N.i.C.E.] Records (a label founded by the band "N.i.C.E." a song that was added on the radio) wanted to present them through something akin to a compilation album."—soundtrackcompany "I started writing this in March, so about a month and a half before the game's release. I started out just taking the sound effects, editing them, and doing some patching. I'm not that good at editing stuff, so when I finished the song I called the composer and gave him some feedback. I just gave him ideas and told him what I'd done so far."—

: Muse | Beyoncé1. Technical Field The present invention relates to a composite substrate using a metal nitride and a manufacturing method thereof. 2. Related Art In recent years, composite substrates using a metal nitride have been actively developed. Due to excellent characteristics, such as high hardness, resistance to impact, and high corrosion resistance, including excellent electrical characteristics, the composite substrates are expected to be applied to the fields of semiconductor parts. Many of the composite substrates have been proposed so far. For example, JP-A-2002-113507 discloses that a composite substrate with excellent processability can be obtained by low temperature nitriding of stainless steel foil (Fe—Cr—Ni alloy) with Si and Al or the like incorporated in Fe by using a plasma CVD apparatus. In the case of the composite substrate with excellent processability, since the surface layer is subjected to a nitridation treatment to a great depth, the oxide film of the surface layer is partly removed. However, if the surface layer which is completely nitrified is simply present on the substrate, the stability of the oxide film obtained through a heat treatment in a subsequent step is increased, and the wettability to a brazing metal is deteriorated. Therefore, the processability of the substrate in the subsequent step is decreased. Furthermore, JP-A-2010-077274 and JP-A-2010-185535 disclose that by additionally subjecting a surface of a steel ribbon (an Fe—Cr—Ni alloy) from which the surface is subjected to fine finishing to a nitridation treatment, the Fe<sub>2</sub>O<sub>3</sub> film is formed on the surface, and the corrosion resistance of the steel ribbon in the subsequent step is improved. Furthermore, JP-A-2013-94577 discloses that through a nitridation treatment for forming the Fe<sub>2</sub>O<sub>3</sub> film, the number of defects of the steel ribbon after a heat treatment in the subsequent step is decreased. However, in the composite substrates using a metal nitride, problems in the nitridation treatment for forming the Fe<sub>2</sub>O<sub>3</sub> film, generation of a heterogeneous nucleation layer, decrease in the processability of the substrate in the subsequent step, and the like have not been solved.
